15 March 2019

Dear Valued Customer,

Curium Brexit contingency plan update

We are writing to you to provide you with an update from the last communication sent on 18th February 2019.

We have been working very closely with the Brexit Supply Contingency team at the DHSC to provide you with relevant guidance following this week's tumultuous political circumstances. Today the only information we can provide you with is that there will be no changes to your deliveries at the beginning of next week as we will maintain our existing road network into the UK until further notice. We will send you a further update on Monday 18th March with the detail of any revised air freight implementation requirements.

Again, the timing of this communication is later than planned due to the political circumstances which have developed this week, therefore a decision on 13 March was not possible.

Please also note that we recognise that some departments may have been impacted by delays to their deliveries in the last two weeks-this is due to French customs strikes which have led to delays on some shipments. We are working with our manufacturing plants to implement earlier release of goods should we encounter such challenges beyond our control in the coming weeks.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you again for your collaboration and input into our contingency planning process.

In the meantime, please contact us at our head-office or your local account manager should you require any further information.

Kind regards,

Kathryn Thomas
